For dinner I went to a nearby Ecuadorian restaurant called Mi Cocina. I started my meal with a Empanada de Morocho or pork filled Hominy sales. My main course was Seco de pollo or chicken stew with white rice and slices of tomatoes and avocado. I got a very good part. The chicken was moist and delicious. Prices are moderate to high for Quito. read more. What User doesn't like about Mi Cocina:

A very common restaurant quiet and popular during weekends. Salads are poor : don't expect any tomatoes or other things different to lettuce, carrots, onion and croutons . According to the waiter a classic salad has letucce , onion and croutons . The others have an ingredient like chicken or shrimp the basic. Rice tends to be a little oily with a clear taste to butter. Service was good. Prices between moderate.I read more.
